

Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam

The Department of Defense (DoD) received Congressional authorization for a Base Realignment and Closure Round in 2005. BRAC is a means to achieve several goals: eliminate excess infrastructure; reshape the military; pursue jointness; optimize military readiness; and realize significant savings in support of transforming the DoD.

Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam Quick Facts and FAQs

Released May 22, 2009

Why?

- 2005 BRAC realigns 26 bases into 12 Joint Bases
- To provide optimal delivery of Installation Management
- To preserve and enhance warfighting capabilities

How?

- One military department lead at each joint location
- Joint management oversight structure to ensure efficient and effective implementation
- Common output level standards to describe performance
- Cost and performance visibility framework to assess performance
- Teamwork!

Common Terms

Common Output Level Standards (COLS): Specific levels of performance for Installation Support (IS) functions based on DoD-established standards

Functional Working Group (FWG): A team of subject matter experts for a particular IS function

Memorandum of Agreement (MOA): The binding document for each Joint Base that describes the organizational structure, resources and other agreements developed between the components

Supported Component: Component transferring Installation Support (IS) functions to another at the Joint Base (JBPHH = Air Force)

Supporting Component: Component having IS functions transferred to them and now responsible for providing IS to the entire Joint Base (JBPHH = Navy)

Implementation Schedule

Initial Operational Capability (IOC) is Jan. 31, 2010: This is when the new Joint Base Commander's Office stands up and everyone starts posturing to transfer resources

Full Operational Capability is Oct. 1, 2010: The transfer of all installation support functions, personnel and all required resources will be complete

Current Initiatives

The JB MOA has been developed and submitted to the Office of the Secretary of Defense for review and approval.

The MOA contains the proposed JB command structure, organizational chart, and resource transfers, and is expected to be signed by the Chief of Staff of the Air Force and Vice Chief of Naval Operations in July 2009.

The Functional Working Groups are hard at work developing Implementation Plans and Standard Operating Procedures to ensure a smooth transition of services.

Human Resources is compiling the necessary information to ensure the military and civilian workforce can make informed decisions regarding their careers.
